It is an appropriate pre-doctoral program and includes study in an area of concentration, required courses to ensure breadth of religious and theological backgrounds, an MA seminar, language study, and the development and writing of a thesis.

Iliff’s flexible curriculum focuses on the disciplinary nature of the Master of Arts degree, providing you maximum opportunity to focus on particular topics, including:

- Theology and Philosophy of Religion

As an accredited institution, financial aid is available to all who qualify.

The program culminates in a disciplinary thesis which is intended to be a focused, article-length, original piece of academic research, demonstrating the student’s mastery of a particular topic/subject; ability to conduct academic research; depth and originality of thought; ability to articulate his or her research in appropriate academic discourse.
