Hear from an alum...

"Iliff was a good grounding time for me," Sue Mohrman (MDIV '89) said. "There were many options presented to consider – but not presumed – from a faculty that was available to us whether we were taking classes with them or not. It was a wonderful opportunity to explore diversity and subjects in-depth, develop basic skills, and build a spiritual foundation that could take me anywhere."

Mohrman has taken her Iliff experience and passion for helping people to executive director positions at the Florida Coalition Against Domestic Violence, Planned Parenthood of Greater Orlando, Inc., American civil Liberties Union of Colorado, and now, as CEO of Warren Village in Denver, CO.

"My strengths seem to lie, not so much in serving people in line for food, as they are in making sure the food line happens."
